Porter Elliott, co-head of the firm's renowned competition law practice, says: "Catherine is an immensely skilled and business-savvy competition lawyer with a seemingly limitless work ethic. I am delighted at her promotion, which is a logical next step in her very promising career."

Before joining Van Bael & Bellis, Catherine worked in the New York office of a major international law firm.

She has assisted sellers, buyers as well as management in a variety of sectors, including renewable energy, insurance, pharmaceuticals, agriculture and the food industry. She also has particular experience in handling complex distressed restructuring and insolvency matters.

Hannelore's promotion within Van Bael & Bellis is recognition of the firm's commitment to continue strengthening its leading independent transaction services pillar.

Hannelore commented on her promotion: "I am grateful to my colleagues and the partnership for this recognition. Over the years, I have seen our team going from strength to strength to become a leading independent. I am proud to be part of this growing and ambitious team, now in a new role with new responsibilities."

Michel Bonne, head of our transaction services team, is very pleased with the promotion of Hannelore: *"Hannelore truly enjoys the thrill of transactions. Clients love working with her, not only because she is technically outstanding, but also because she takes an active lead on transactions and, on top of it all, is such a pleasant person to work with.
